

Birkbeck, University of London

Mobile Computing

Coursework Assignment

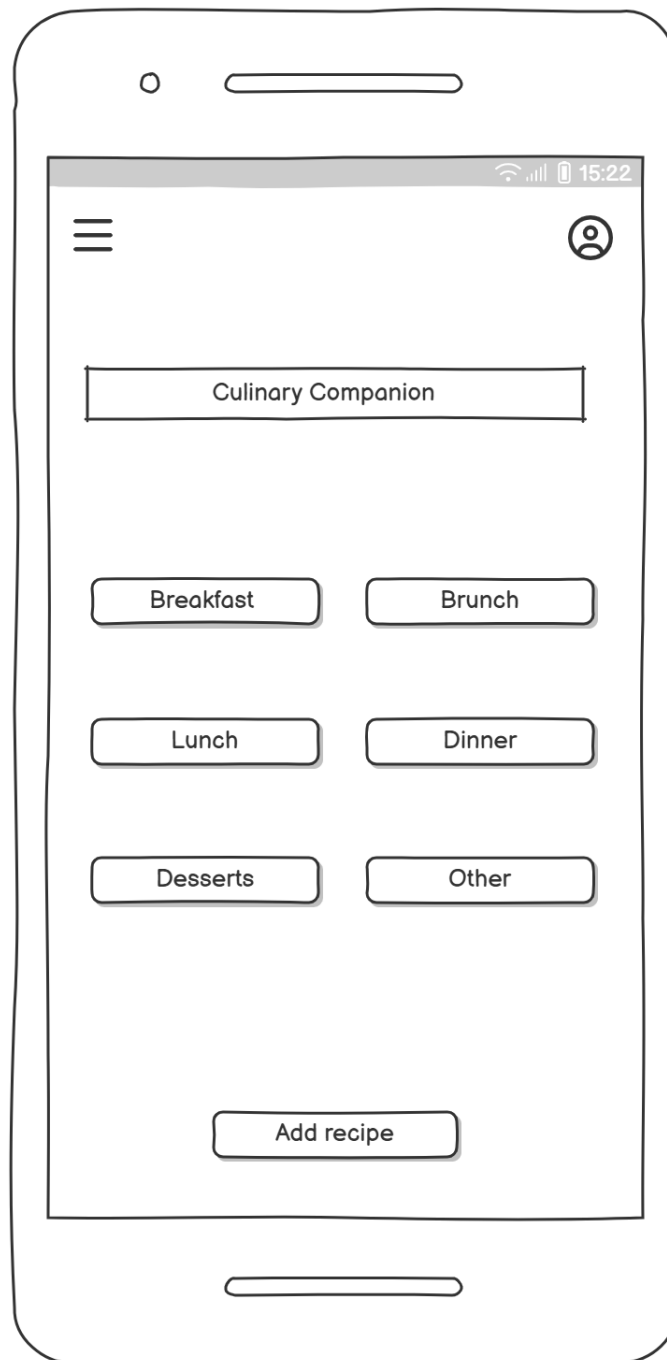

Academic Year 2024/25

Student: Ana Croitor

Student ID: 13726475

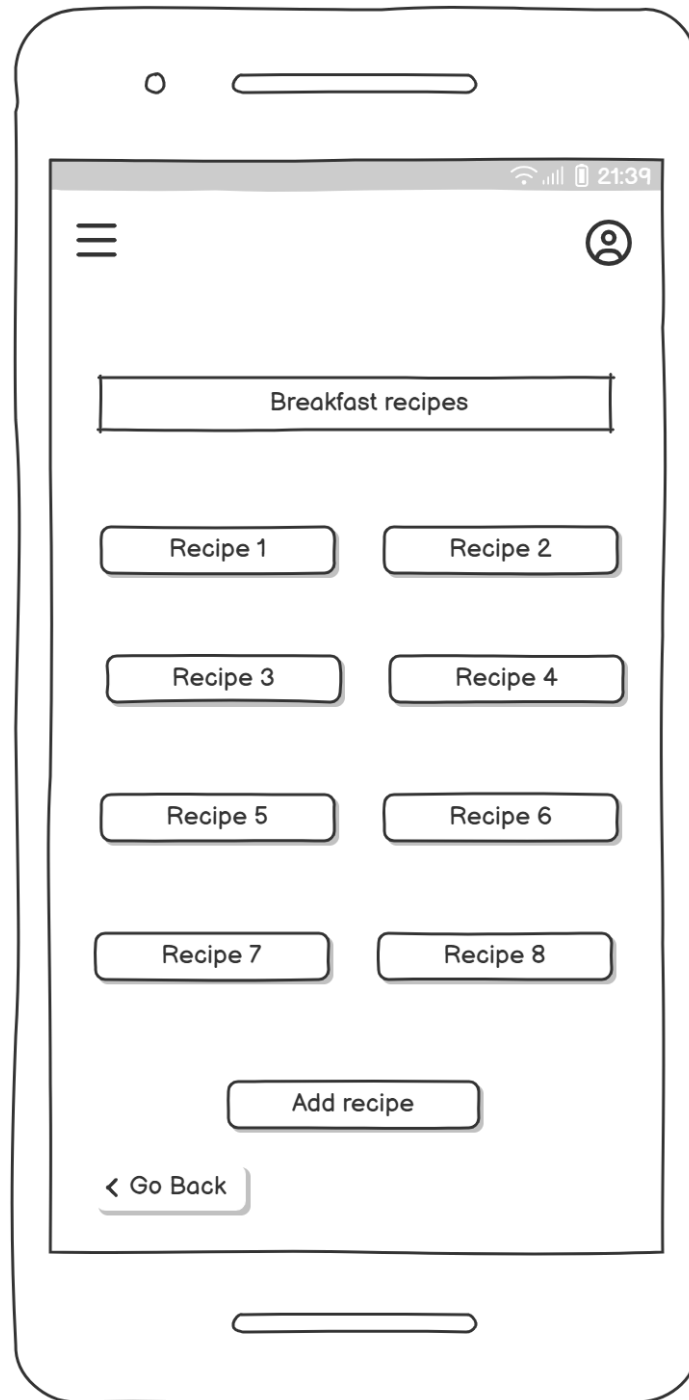

Wireframes

1. Home Screen

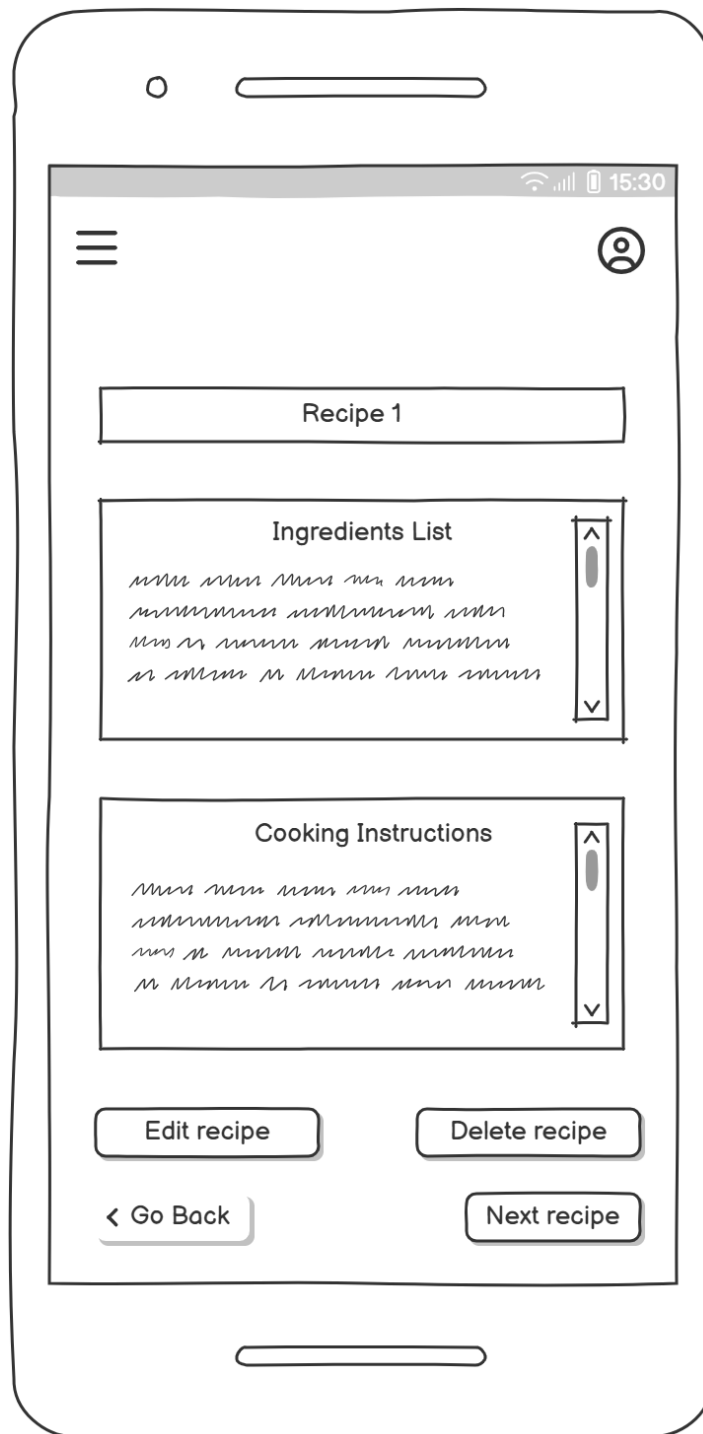

This screen represents the home page and would allow users to select the desired category. It displays the name of the application. There are also provided six buttons with different categories which should take the user to the chosen one. On the bottom of the screen it is provided the button “Add recipe” which users can use to create new recipes. Clicking this button it opens the Create/Edit Recipe Screen.

2. Recipe List Screen

This screen displays the recipes within the chosen category. In this case is displayed the Breakfast category, but the same screen would be used for all categories. There are displayed eight buttons for different recipes. Clicking on any of it, navigates the user to the Recipe Details Screen. The user can go back to the Home Screen by clicking on the “Go Back” button. Also, they can add a new recipe to the displayed category by clicking on the “Add recipe” button.

3. Recipe Details Screen

This screen shows the full details of a selected recipe. There is provided the name of the recipe along with two containers. One provides the list of the ingredients, and the other one displays the cooking instructions. Below this, there is the “Edit recipe” button, and by clicking this, the user would be taken to the “Create/Edit Recipe Screen”. Next to it, there is the “Delete recipe”, in case the user wants to delete it. Clicking on the “Go Back”, the user would go to the home screen. They can navigate to the next recipe by clicking on the “Next recipe” button.

4. Create/Edit Recipe Screen

Recipe name

Category

Ingredients List

Cooking Instructions

Save recipe

Cancel

< Go Back

On this screen the user can create a new recipe or can edit an existing one. On the “Recipe name” tab, one can add or edit the name of the recipe. Under it, there is the category button, which by clicking on the dropdown menu they can make the selection of the category. There are two containers where the user can enter the ingredients for the recipe and the cooking instructions. Under the containers, there is a button to save the recipe and a button to cancel it. Also, the user can go back to the home screen, by clicking on the “Go Back” button.